What is Trans History?

This section includes an article from Perspectives on History and a TED Talk video by transgender activist Samy Nour Younes. Both cover transgender history and discuss the obstacles that trans people face daily, including disrupting the false belief that trans people are a new phenomenon. Transgender people have been a part of many histories worldwide. Here you will learn about the history of the trans movement and the barriers that trans people face to gain visibility and fight for equality.

In 2009, transgender activist Rachel Crandall-Crocker created International Transgender Day of Visibility on March 31st to celebrate the lives and accomplishments of trans communities while raising awareness of the work that still needs to be done to reach full equality.

The History Behind International Transgender Day of Visibility

This section includes an article by the 19th and a video by the Grand Rapids Trans Foundation. Both discuss Rachel Crandall-Crocker, a trans activist, and her process in developing International Transgender Day of Visibility. Crandall-Crocker wanted to create a day where we can celebrate transgender communities and acknowledge their lives as an act of resilience. Learn how this day has grown into an important day for trans and LGBTQIA+ communities.
